Walk to

10.30 ish to 11.40 Margaret Catchpole, Cliff Lane, Ipswich (63) - A large pub, known locally as a 'Tolly Folly', built in 1929 and is the most complete 1930's pub remaining in the whole of the UK. Listed Grade II* it has wood panelling on every wall including the off sales room and it is on CAMRA's National Inventory of Outstanding Pub Interiors. It is named after a local heroine who appeared in a colourful novel by the Reverend Richard Cobbold and led to the area around Pin Mill to be known as Margaret Catchpole country. She was originally convicted for stealing a horse from the Cobbold family and eventually was twice sentenced to death and transported to Australia in 1801.

The large PUBLIC BAR is completely wood panelled with a parquet floor, original bar counter which curves at the end, original bar back and has a splendid polished stone fireplace with oblong bevelled mirror above and is the only one in the pub to have a coal fire in it. The impressive curved and leaded bay window with bell pushes has fixed bare bench seating and is so large that in front of the window there is a row of five tables !. There is one pool table (but room for four !), darts, machines and big screen T.V. The door on the left went to the outside toilets but now you walk across a flagstone-style passage and remain 'inside'. The gents' has some brown glazed brick on the wall, some new tiling and an old trough with a full run (no modesty partitions).

The completely wood panelled OFF-SALES room (currently used for storage) is as large as some snug bars with a bar counter, shelved bar back, 'Retail' in a stained and leaded glass window in the door. The completely square wood panelled and carpeted SALOON BAR has leaded lights, polished stone fireplace with wood surround and gas fire, parquet floor around bar. The window in the door has 'Saloon' in a stained and leaded panel. There are some bell pushes, lovely small quarter circle bar, leatherette original bench seating and some square pub tables. The gents here was originally 'outside' but now you walk across a small extension.

The cavernous parquet floored REAR BAR is completely square wood panelled to picture frame height, and has fixed seating in the splendid curved and leaded bay window. It has a polished stone fireplace with grand wood surround of square panelling and a narrow bevelled mirror above (used ?), curved bar with a (new) painting depicting Margaret Catchpole above the original bar back. There is 'Lounge' painted on one of the stained and leaded door windows and the room has a jukebox and darts. The room has two doors as one went to the former outside (now inside) gents' (Ladies always inside ?). The veranda / loggia with four brick pillars looks out onto a functioning Bowling Green which is leased to a local Bowling Club and has a new clubhouse. Tenant: John & Carole Sexton - (Pubmaster) Open: 11-11 - 01473 252450 - *Greene King IPA NI/NS***

Walk to Station

15.30 Ipswich
16.07 Bury St Edmunds

Walk to

4.30 to 5.20 Nutshell, 17 The Traverse, Bury St Edmunds - off Abbeygate St in the pedestrian area in the middle of the town - Superb genuine unspoilt traditional pub with one tiny room which is one of 3 claimants of Great Britains smallest pub (Guinness Book of Records). The building is 400 years old, was formerly a news agents shop which became a pub in 1860 and can be full with a dozen people in it ! The ground floor is 15ft 10in x 7ft 6 in and the record set in 1984 for the number of customers in the pub, with no one behind the bar or upstairs, and without anyone standing on shoulders is 102 and a dog ! This Grade II Listed Building is on CAMRA's National Inventory of Outstanding Pub Interiors. It has an attractive curved frontage with a large inn sign attached to the wall. Look for the hatch in the window which opens out onto the street and through which beer was sold to customers on market days. It sells only two real ales, Draught Guinness, one lager, white wine only, has one malt whisky, and no smooth beers.

The tiny bar has a wooden floor, fixed uncovered bench seating all around, one tiny table which was a sewing machine, tiny bar area and wood panelling all around. The fire place has been covered up. The mumified cat hanging above the bar was found behind the fireplace in 1935 and was a local way of warding off evil spirits from houses. There is only one toilet which is through a curtain and upstairs on the first floor. There are various knick nacks around the walls including items which are considered the smallest of their type including a miniature copy of The Times, the smallest dart board and snooker table, a mini-loo. The impressive display of curio's also includes an elephant's tooth, a three-legged chicken, a disused left leg, and a mumified mouse. Many of the items came from the Pawnbroker's shop which was next door at the turn of the century.

A frame advertising the Nutshell states 'coach parties welcome, function room and dining area for parties of 2 or less !! There are a number of 'Smallest Pub' souvenirs on sale including T Shirts, wall plaques, postcards, boxes of matches. Landlord warns that you must be prepared to talk to anyone due to the size of the pub !. Only food is crisps and nuts - Mon-Sat 11-3; 6-11 (11-11 summer & Wed & Sat): Sun Closed - Tenant: Martin (Greene King) - Tel: 01284 764867 / 705387 - Greene King IPA and Abbot Ale
